

Taking Action for Safety and Health:

IIPP Course for Staffing Agencies and Employers That Use Temporary Workers

Thursday, September 19, 2019

1:00-5:00 pm

193 Polk Avenue

2nd Floor -- UT CIS Training Room

Nashville, Tennessee

- ▶ Why are temporary workers at an increased risk of work-related injuries?
- ▶ What are your responsibilities under OSHA regulations?
- ▶ What are the responsibilities of host employers?
- ▶ Does the host employer or the staffing agency enter injuries on the OSHA 300 log?

A University of California Berkeley trainer will address these questions and offer strategic solutions to these issues. An OSHA Consultation Service consultant has been invited as a co-trainer.

Come to this free half-day training where you will learn about developing and implementing an effective Injury and Illness Prevention Program (IIPP), particularly as it relates to dual employer situations. A representative from OSHA Consultation Service has been invited to describe the expectations for staffing agencies and for host employers with regards to protecting temporary workers. Examples of best practices for meeting OSHA's requirements and preventing workplace injuries and illnesses in dual employer situations will be discussed.

This special training is being co-sponsored with the American Staffing Association and the Center for Industrial Services at the University of Tennessee's Institute for Public Service. It is being held specifically for staffing agencies and host employers in Tennessee and nearby states.

LEARN ABOUT:

- Meeting OSHA requirements and expectations for an effective IIPP
- What records you need to keep if an employee is injured and which records the host employer must keep
- Strategies for communicating with host employers about health and safety issues and responsibilities.

RECEIVE:

- Free Factsheets and Tools to help you implement your injury and illness prevention program (IIPP)
- Resources for technical assistance
- A certificate of completion.
