

Five Principles for Retention, Promotion, and Replacement

1. Focus on recruiting and growing talent from within

Five Principles for Retention, Promotion, and Replacement

1. Focus on recruiting and growing talent from within
2. Give top performers more than they are ready for—promote early!

Five Principles for Retention, Promotion, and Replacement

1. Focus on recruiting and growing talent from within
2. Give top performers more than they are ready for—promote early!
3. Move your top performers into management—give them a career, not just a job

Five Principles for Retention, Promotion, and Replacement

1. Focus on recruiting and growing talent from within
2. Give top performers more than they are ready for—promote early!
3. Move your top performers into management—give them a career, not just a job
4. Continue to “feed the engine” and be explicit about the path forward for new hires—metrics, milestones, and training

Five Principles for Retention, Promotion, and Replacement

1. Focus on recruiting and growing talent from within
2. Give top performers more than they are ready for—promote early!
3. Move your top performers into management—give them a career, not just a job
4. Continue to “feed the engine” and be explicit about the path forward for new hires—metrics, milestones, and training
5. Be alert for the “Peter Principle” -> People rising to their level of incompetence